Our Moundsville Letter.

The Weather and the Mud—The McFadden Suit—A Small Fire—Christmas Prospects—Literary Matters.

Moundsville, December 3, 1874.

Yesterday all day the weather was mild, and our streets were muddy, but it was very unpleasant moving about, especially in any one particular as to the condition of the mud. This comes from the condition of our streets and sidewalks. Our small amount of brick or stone that now and then occurs, is the only relief we have from the mud. A fire occurred in the Lower Ward yesterday morning at about 1 o'clock. A small frame house, the property of Col. Lockwood, was consumed by a fire of devouring element. The house was unoccupied at the time, a family having moved out of it the day previous. A large fire was left burning in it in the evening, and in some way it caught the building. No other damage was done save the disturbing of the sweet rest of many by the ringing of the bells and the cry of fire.

In one of my communications some time ago, during the sitting of our Circuit Court, I mentioned that the trial of "the State of West Va. vs. G. S. McFadden" was in progress. My attention has been called to the fact that I did not give the result of the trial, as I had intended doing in my next communication. The decision in the case was that the State of West Va. was entitled to the sum of $25,000. This verdict, about which there has been so much talk, has thus been decided by law, and in justice to all it should be let rest hereafter and forever.

Our confectionaries are filling up with holiday presents, and the children these pretty days spend as much time as possible in the stores, viewing the beautiful goods for sale to them. We have no such thing as a day long ago, when we longed to have Christmas come.

It is a shame that we as yet this winter, have had no literary organization of any kind whatever, for the benefit of those who are inclined, but we are glad to say that this is now a fixed fact, that our Lyceum will commence its weekly meetings to-morrow night. We have ample material to make the meetings pleasant and profitable, and we hope that all will avail themselves of the opportunity.

There is a rumor on the streets this morning that our genial young friend Thos. Patton, this day takes to himself a partner for life. It is not true we hope he will excuse us for mentioning it, for it is a story that should be told, and is good looking enough, and has just as much right to get a wife as anybody else has. It is rumored that the matrimonial market will be lively here for some weeks to come.

Mr. Faulkner and the Capital Question.

From the Martinsburg Independent of Thursday.

Last Monday's Wheeling INTELLIGENCER contained a lengthy editorial on the Senatorial question, asserting that Mr. Faulkner was a candidate for the United States Senate, and that he was endeavoring to make a combination with those opposed to the removal of their support to Mr. Faulkner, for the support of the delegates from the Fourth District for Senator, in return, get his friends in other portions of the State to stand by Charleston for the capital. We know that certain newspapers have run out Mr. Faulkner for President, for Vice-President, for Senator, and Speaker of the House of Representatives. We are not sure that Mr. Faulkner say that he would be a candidate for either of these positions. As independent journalists we would not be likely to confide either his hopes or desires to us, but we manage to keep well posted on both the written and unwritten movements of politicians, and do know that at a recent meeting of Mr. Faulkner and his special friends in room 10, they determined and we presume he did likewise to push for Senatorial honors. The meeting was private in its nature, and we do not know how far they attempted to represent "we the people," but the assertion made by the INTELLIGENCER of this capital combination is strange news to us. We know the people are in favor of immediate removal, and we further know that the people have not changed their views in this respect. Further, if the INTELLIGENCER's assertion be true, then Mr. Faulkner has sadly changed; for we have heretofore attended meetings at which Mr. Faulkner presided, in favor of removal, even when a special representative of Charleston was offering such inducements to Martinsburg as the Court of Appeals. If therefore there is any change here on that question, it is with Mr. Faulkner, and not with the people, but it is really would be queer if he would change out of self-interest for the Senatorship, when he declined to change when the people of Martinsburg might have had a special session of the Court of Appeals. We must therefore refuse to credit the assertion made by the INTELLIGENCER, and hope that Mr. Faulkner, as a man, and as a citizen, if not as a politician, will deem it proper to place himself square on the record upon so important a question.

The Prematrimonial Model.

A writer says: "It does not take long for a mother who has a marriageable daughter to discern a model man among bachelors. She spots with unerring precision the one who, according to her way of arguing, nature intended to be the happy father of a happy family. He is moderately young—not over forty at most—possessed of a handsome fortune, and a good man to make a woman happy, provided, we might add, the woman is his daughter. Mr. Lazarus, who has not a son in the world, is a poor creature who must be contented to be passed over in silence, as his poverty deserves. Yet sometimes the woman with a daughter to dispose of takes a less venal view of the subject, and admits to her husband in confidence that such or such a young man would make an excellent match for Caroline if he only had a good income. As a rule we are not apt to think that mothers are apt to look for model men among portentious youths.

We are afraid that gold casts something of an aureole around the head of a portentious youth. It is known to be a brilliant bargain-driver, whose hand never did a charitable deed, unless publicity was to be attained. His penuriousness becomes a prudent economy in the maternal eye. His temperamental coldness is infinitely preferable to the meaningless gush of the emotional young man. His known how hard it is to get money, and he will keep it, reasons the shrewd mamma. He is nearer being a model than any one else whom she has yet seen. By all means let his visits be encouraged, and if he should throw tender glances at Caroline, of course there is a special providence in it. It would be complimentary to the maternal shrewdness to be able to think that she invariably pursued the same course of reasoning for the marriage had taken place. But, unfortunately, the son-in-law that is to be and the son-in-law that is not are not in the same light, and he who is the pre-model is left, he not quite up to the standard by the time the honeymoon has passed.
